

Faith-Filled Doubt

Be a part of a woman's journey as she circumvents the challenges of love and marriage with her wit and peculiar outlook on life. Evelyn was resigned to marrying a man for whom she did not have romantic feelings. Such would have been manageable had her biggest self-imposed obstacle not been her lack of faith. She was prepared for and could handle with elegance any situation in which she found herself mired, or so she thought. Would what she would encounter provoke the best or worst of her?
