RELIGION IN EARNEST
A Memorial of Mrs. Mary Lyth, of York

John Lyth
1861

Excerpt: ...be to His name for an interest in the blood of sprinkling. Here is the source of my happiness, and all I want is here. THEN-I had a father and mother who loved and cared for me: NOW-my father is gone to his reward, and my mother is sunk in decrepitude, daily waiting her release; and I, myself a mother, have resting upon me the care and anxiety of a family; but I have inherited the promise, which descends from generation to generation. THEN-I looked forward to what might be my future portion: NOW-I look back through five and twenty years, in which goodness and mercy have followed me until now; although my passage through the wilderness has all along been marked with unfaithfulness. Here my heart fills with gratitude. What shall I render to the Lord for all his goodness towards me? THEN-I had many friends, who are NOW passed away; but Jesus is my never-failing Friend, and through His grace, I hope soon to meet again those, who through faith and patience have inherited the promises. THEN-I had much to endure and suffer; but NOW-five and twenty years of trial and suffering are over, with only one regret, that I have not suffered more patiently, and expected more largely from Him, who orders all things for the best. What still awaits me is only known to Thee; but prepare me for the event, and let Thy will be done. This is my hearts desire, uttered I believe, in the spirit of resignation; but it is Thy doing, and to Thee be all the glory. And now, I present to Thee my dear husband, and my five children: let us all be Thine-Thine to guide, Thine to save, Thine to govern, and Thine to crown. Seven years ago my dear father entered into rest. This day, replete with memories dear, The well-known image brings to view Of him, whose name I still revere; Whose worth till lost, I never knew. My father, (still the name is sweet!) Now in a fairer region dwells: Him gladly will I go to meet, Though...
